

2010 Duke Spirituality & Health Research Class (July and August)

July 2010

Rabbi John Atkins. John is the founder and Senior Pastor (Rabbi) of Congregation Beth Hashem; the first One New Man Messianic Congregation in Durham with another in Cary, NC. John graduated from CCC Bible College (Fayetteville) / Impact Ministries Bible College in Hunstville, AL. He has more than 14 years of Messianic Jewish cultural experience. Recently Beth Hashem has joined Be in Health Global (BiH), Thomaston, GA as a Network Associate. BiH is dedicated to restoring wholeness of spirit, soul and body. As such, the vision of Beth Hashem is to restore original Hebraic understanding of the Human Trichotomy as part of this pursuit of restoration. This is also the topic of the book John is writing. Lastly, Beth Hashem has opportunities to partner with local assisted living facilities in a Faith and Health partnership venture. E-mail: bethhashem@yahoo.com.

Kelly Arora, M.A. Spiritual director, M.A. Religion. Adjunct faculty member at Iliff School of Theology (Denver) and Ph.D. student in the University of Denver/Iliff School of Theology Joint Ph.D. Program in Religious & Theological Studies (religion & psychological studies concentration). My dissertation will construct a model of spiritual direction to address the long-term needs of women with autoimmune diseases. I also serve as co-leader of the Faith & Help Theological Study Group in the Society for Pastoral Theology, and I am part of the leadership team for the 2011 Spiritual Directors International's Spiritual Direction & Health Care Institute. E-mail: karora@stu.iliff.edu.

Callie Hugo MA (Psychology) MTh , DTh, Associate Professor from the Department of Practical Theology and Associate Professor of Pastoral Counselling and Psychology at University of South Africa, Pretoria. I am involved in the teaching of theological and psychology students in the discipline of pastoral care, counselling, therapy and psychology. I have published mainly on pastoral interventions with victims of post traumatic stress from a neuropsychological viewpoint, supportive intervention with trauma victims, emotional focused therapy in marriage and family counselling, reconciliation in conflict management, the impact of Post Modernism on Practical theology as discipline and on the ministry of the church, pastoral care and guidance of terminal illness. I am chairperson of the Southern African Association for Pastoral Work. I am a licensed psychologist with a private practice. E-mail: Hugocj@unisa.ac.za.

Antonios Chatziiliadis, M.D. I graduated from Athens Medical School and joined the residency program of psychiatry at Duke last summer. While in Greece, I attended a master's degree program on Stress Management and Health Promotion, which made me particularly interested in the fields of gene-environment interactions and mind-body medicine. I am currently finishing my first year of residency and wish to pursue a career in academic psychiatry. Although I haven't made my mind for a specific field of research yet, I am eager to attend the Summer Research Course on Spirituality, Theology, and Health in order to become more familiar with this as a potential field I could work on in the future. E-mail: antonios.chatziiliadis@duke.edu

Yesenia Colon, BA. My name is Yesenia Colón Rivera. I was born in Tennessee and raised in Bayamón, Puerto Rico. I obtained my BA in Biblical Pastoral Theology on May, 2009 from the Antillean Adventist University. There I acted as the president of the Ministerial Students Association. I worked as a chaplain for two years, with both terminal mental health patients. I am pursuing my Psy.D. in Clinical Psychology at Ponce School of Medicine, PR, where I serve as Student Council Representative and collaborate as volunteer in a research project with cancer patients. My research interest is the neurobiology of Christian conversion and spirituality and adherence to ART in patients with HIV. E-mail: ycolonpsyd@gmail.com

Frans Johannes Cronje, MBChB (MD), MSc. Frans is a medical doctor with an MSc in Aerospace Medicine from University of Pretoria, South Africa. In 2003, he completed a 1-year clinical Fellowship in Hyperbaric and Underwater Medicine at Duke University. He is the pioneer of modern hyperbaric medicine in South Africa; founder, President and CEO of Divers Alert Network of Southern; a senior lecturer and researcher at the Department of Interdisciplinary Health Sciences, University of Stellenbosch; President of the International Congress of Hyperbaric Medicine; Past President of the Southern African Undersea and Hyperbaric Medical Association (SAUHMA); and founding President of the Wound Healing Association of Southern Africa (WHASA). He is the International Facilitator for Be in Health Global (www.beinhealth.com), a ministry in Thomaston, GA. He has a special interest and calling in the application of Biblical principles for abundant life, health and healing. E-mail: frans@hydra.org.za.

Faye Davenport, RN., BA., BTh., MN., MEd. I am an R/N who has worked in the Oncology specialty since the 1980s. I am currently a nursing lecturer full-time at the Universal College of Learning, School of Nursing, in New Zealand, and work casually in Oncology. I am also ordained deacon in the Anglican church. I have had a passionate interest in the spiritual dimension within nursing for much of my nursing career. I completed the research component of my Master of Nursing degree exploring with adult patients with acute leukaemia what they saw as their spiritual needs and who/what had assisted them with the meeting of those needs. Earlier this year I enrolled in PhD study to further study in that area. E-mail: fayedav@inspire.net.nz.

Christopher E. De Bono, doctoral cand. Christopher's intellectual passion is clinical chaplaincy. He has worked in acute, community, home care and mental health institutional settings. Most recently he was director of spiritual care services at The Mental Health Centre Penetanguishene in Ontario Canada. There he increased staffing levels 200%, championed an integrated "clinical" chaplaincy, chaired the hospital's first ethics committee and co-chaired the Bill of Rights project. He has presented at local, national and international conferences. Currently, Christopher is working on his doctorate in Spirituality, Mental Health and Ethics at the University of Toronto, Canada. For fun Christopher and his wife Susannah Johnson enjoy sailing. E-mail: skate@sympatico.ca.

Bill Dorman, D.Min., BCC. Dr. Dorman is a Board Certified Chaplain (Association of Professional Chaplains) who serves as the Director of Chaplaincy Services at Presbyterian Hospital, Albuquerque, NM. He has a long-standing interest in caring for the whole person (body, mind, spirit), and is attending this conference in order to acquire resources and skills that will help him in his leadership as his health care organization continues to focus on caring for the whole person. On a personal note, he and his wife have two adult daughters, four grandchildren, and three cats. He enjoys swimming, reading, exercising, and playing his trumpet in the Albuquerque Concert Band. E-mail: WDorman@phs.org.

Kathleen Drew RN, MSN. Kathleen is a case manager at Mayo Clinic Hospital in Jacksonville, Florida. Prior nursing positions involved general, critical care, and flight nursing, and outpatient cardiac rehabilitation. Educational background includes a BSN from the University of Missouri and MSN from Vanderbilt University School of Nursing. Having just completed the post master's curriculum at the University of Florida, Ms. Drew is in pursuit of becoming an adult nurse practitioner and is interested in faith based life style change as part of disease management. E-mail: drewcrew@clearwire.net.

John D. Guarneri, M.D. Dr. Guarneri grew up in the New York area. He attended Manhattan College and graduated with a B.S. degree in 1969. The initial portion of his medical education was at the University of Bologna, Italy followed by attending New York Medical College where he received his M.D. degree in 1976. His residency in obstetrics and gynecology was performed at St. Barnabas Medical Center from 1976 through 1980. Dr. Guarneri has been in private practice in obstetrics and gynecology in Winter Park, Florida from 1980 through the present time. He is presently practicing only gynecology. In the past he has been a board member of the St. Margaret Mary Elementary School and Bishop Moore High School. He has been Chief of Staff at Winter Park Memorial Hospital 2001 through 2003. He has also become a System Medical Staff Leader at Florida Hospital overseeing 2200 physicians at seven campuses in the capacity of Secretary Treasurer 2004-2005, President Elect 2006-2007, President 2008-2009 and presently Past President starting 2010 through 2012. Dr. Guarneri established the physician driven Department of Health Care and Spirituality at Florida Hospital in August 2008. He is considering research in the area of immunological markers in cancer patients that are faith based in comparison to non-faith based patients. E-mail: johnobgyn47@hotmail.com.

Holly C. Hoffman, M.D., MAMS-C. Holly is a pediatrician who has practiced for 24 years in Carlisle, Pennsylvania. Recognizing that typical American medical care alone fails to adequately meet the needs of adolescents with emotional problems, she pursued a degree in theology and received a Master of Arts in Ministerial Studies from the Lutheran Theological Seminary in Gettysburg in May 2009. She serves as Diaconal Minister for St. Paul Lutheran Church in Carlisle and started a youth mentoring program, WAY (Walking Alongside Youth) at that church. She is also interested in the faith-healthcare interface in the areas of immigrant health and health missions in impoverished countries. E-mail: hollymom@earthlink.net.

Marek Jarosz, Ph.D. Dr. Jarosz graduated with a degree in theology and doctor of psychology. He works at the Institute of Psychology at the John Paul II Catholic University of Lublin in Poland. The subject of doctoral thesis was “The social “self” and the relationship to God”. He run courses in the psychology of religion. He is the author of a book titled “Interpersonal determinants of religious relationship” and of about 30 scientific articles. The main interests include the social correlates and the function of religion and the impact of religion on coping with difficult situations. Along with a team of researchers, he is conducting research on the psychological aspects of perceiving illness. E-mail: xmj@wp.pl.

Lorena Jiménez, BA, MA. Lorena is a master’s degree fellow at Universidad de Chile’s Health Education program. She received her BA in Physical Therapy in 2001 from the same University, and her specialization in Neurorehabilitation in 2008. Her primary areas of research interest are teamwork in neurorehabilitation and spirituality in physical rehabilitation. Lorena has worked in clinical and educational settings. At present she is an assistant professor at the UMCE University in Santiago, and is working in Chile’s leading complex rehabilitation center, Clínica Los Coihues, were she is conducting her thesis: Curricular formation needs in Spirituality from the study of lived experiences of patients and perceptions of physiotherapy staff in rehabilitation E-mail: lojico19@yahoo.com.

Parameshwaran Rama Krishnan, M.D. In medical school, I was fascinated by how a tiny pill of Haldol could improve behavior problems. I found similarities between psychotherapy and my grandparent’s philosophies. In psychiatry residency, I had a wide range of research experience; community research in geriatrics, psychopharmacology fellowship. My findings from Lunar-lunacy studies puzzled me about possible “cosmic connection with mood swings in bipolar disorder and cyclothymia” and that existential questions could have medical answers. I won W.H.O. and national “Young Mental Health Professional” awards. Currently, as a founder/director of The AdiBhat Foundation (<http://www.theadibhat.org/research.html>), I lead a multi-centered study aiming to advocate introduction of spirituality-curriculum into health education programs in India. E-mail: dr.eshwaran@gmail.com.

Amy Leung, M.D. I am currently a psychiatry intern, and one of my main interests in this field lies in the space where body, mind, and spirit intersect. My personal religious practice is Zen Buddhism; this is the gateway through which I have entered this remarkable place. I am familiar the impact my own religious practice has made on my personal development; I would love to see how spiritual practice affects mental and physical health as demonstrated by empirical means on a larger population. I have long wondered in what ways spiritual growth could effectively be incorporated to patients' personal work on mental and physical healing, as well as how spirituality (and the loss of it!) affects the practice of mental health practitioners' work. E-mail: amy.leung@duke.edu

Christiana Liem, M.Div., BCC. Christiana has an MA(RE) and MDiv from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary. In addition, she has an undergraduate degree in education and a graduate degree in library science. She works as a staff chaplain at University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center since 2000 and has been involved in many committees such as the OR Bereavement Committee, Code Blue Task Force, Charting Project, and many others. Her interests include but not limited to the relationship between spirituality and the quality of life of cancer patients; the use of the online communications in coping with life-threatening diseases; and spiritual assessment tools for cancer patients. E-mail: cgliem@mdanderson.org.

M. C. Joëlle Fignolé Lofton, M.A. As a Ph.D. student in the Department of Psychology at Howard University (HU) and future professor, Ms. Fignolé Lofton is investigating the relationship between subjective psychological measures and objective physiological states. The HU IRB has approved her study to measure depression, personality, and spirituality in college students; and determine if a composite score of these measures correlates with their health perceptions. Additionally, the HU General Clinical Research Center is reviewing her funding proposal to test the Biopsychospiritual Health Model (BHM) (© 2009) as a predictor of the metabolic syndrome in African-American college students. E-mail: mflofton@howard.edu

Leroy G. Mack, LCDR, CHC, USN. Chaplain Mack serves as a chaplain resident at Naval Medical Center Portsmouth, Portsmouth VA. He is a graduate of Wesley Theological Seminary in Washington DC. His ministry experience prior to chaplaincy included 7 years of pastoral care and counseling and serving as an adjunct professor. His assignment as the chaplain resident for the ICU, oncology and internal medicine wards has afforded him the opportunity to work with medical staff in addressing the End of Life care of patients. His research topic is "Comparison of medical beliefs and medical practices of healthcare providers in a Navy ICU." E-mail: Leroy.Mack@med.navy.mil.

Rev. Oliver L. McMahanm D.Min., is Professor of Pastoral Care/Counseling and Dean of Ministries at the Church of God Theological Seminary, Cleveland, TN (1988). Completed DMin in Pastoral Care/Ministerial Ethics at Brite Divinity School, Texas Christian University (1984) and PhD in Counseling/Family Psychology at Georgia State University (1997). Published in the Journal for Pastoral Counseling and the Journal for Psychology and Theology; books include The Caring Church (2004), Scriptural Counseling (1995); chapters in Distance Writing and Computer Assisted Interventions in Psychiatry and Mental Health (2002), Workbooks in Prevention and Psychotherapy: A Practical Guide for Clinicians (2004), Spiritual Direction and the Care of Souls (2004). E-mail: omcmahan@aol.com.

Kevin "Pat" Parnell, DMin. Dr. Parnell holds an MA in Biblical Conflict Management from Trinity Theological Seminary, Newburg, IN, Master of Divinity and Doctor of Ministry from Faith Evangelical Lutheran Seminary, Tacoma, WA. He trained in chaplaincy through Clinical Pastoral Education and is Board Certified by the Association of Professional Chaplains. His current work is with Providence Regional Medical Center, Everett, Washington. He serves three facilities, forty hours per week. His emphasis and interest this week centers on religion, spirituality and health through biblical/ethical applications in the healthcare setting. He is married to Thelma C. Liebherr-Parnell. The Parnell's have two sons and four grandchildren. E-mail: kpparnell@earthlink.net.

Jakub Pawlikowski, PhD. I work as an assistant lecturer and a scientist in the Department of Ethics and Human Philosophy, Faculty of Nursing and Health Sciences, Medical University of Lublin in Poland. I am graduated in medicine and philosophy and defended doctoral thesis in medicine in 2007. Now, I specialize in public health and bioethics. I am author of about 20 articles medical journals and was a fellow at Deusto

University in Bilbao (Spain) in medical anthropology area (predoctoral Marie Curie fellowship). I am interested in religion-medicine relationships. Some of my publications to date concern the influence of religious beliefs on the physician's decisions-making, palliative and geriatric care, the problem of miracle in the history of philosophy and the belief in miracles among the medical students and professionals. E-mail: jpawlikowski@wp.pl.

Lawrence (Larry) Peacock, M.D. I majored in psychology in college (Rutgers). And, as part of my senior thesis, I worked with a spiritual directory exploring and defining "Love." After college, I attended Harvard Divinity School, completing an MTS. Soon after that, I decided to go to medical school (UVM 2008). Currently, I'm finishing up my 2nd year of residency in psychiatry at Duke University. Specifically, I'm interested in the ways in which faith/ religion impacts health, relationships, and quality of life. I'm also interested in understanding forgiveness as a mechanism of change. E-mail: lawrence.peacock@duke.edu.

Martha Rinker, Ph.D. Martha is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Psychology at Lamar University in Beaumont, Texas. She earned her Ph.D. in Experiment (Sensory) Psychology from Indiana University in Bloomington and a B.S. in mathematics and psychology from the University of Wisconsin – River Falls. She currently teaches undergraduate students, as well as graduate students in an Industrial/Organizational and Community/Counseling Master's program. Prior research interests have included tactile/sensory perception and cognitive psychology. Current interests include health psychology and its interface with spirituality. E-mail: marinker@my.lamar.edu.

Robin Rosenthal, Ph.D. Dr. Rosenthal holds a doctorate in Counseling Psychology from The University of Georgia, and is currently Coordinator of the Counselor Education program at Northern State University in Aberdeen, SD. Her interests in religion and spirituality began in working with older adults with chronic illness. As part of her role as a counselor educator, her focus has expanded to include helping counselors learn what kinds of religious or spiritual issues college students would like to be able to discuss in college counseling settings. She has recently been involved in conducting quantitative and qualitative research on this issue. E-mail: rosenthal@northern.edu.

Angela Schmidt, DMin candidate. Angela is a Healthcare Chaplaincy Coordinator and has created a spiritual care program that covers twelve hospitals in Ontario, Canada (rural and urban). She provides supervision to over 40 volunteer chaplains and offers on-going spiritual care education. Angela runs a successful Supervised Pastoral Education Unit each year and has partnered with a university to bring professors to the area to teach graduate courses in the area of spirituality and health. Angela is currently enrolled in a DMin at Wilfred Laurier University. She has an M.A. in clinical psychology from Wheaton College, taught undergraduate psychology courses at Redeemer University College in Ancaster, Ontario and was a marriage and family therapist for twelve years. As a mother of five (elementary through university age) and a pastor's wife, she lives in rural Ontario on a peaceful lake. She is interested in researching the role and benefits of chaplains in healthcare as well as the use of the 'Patient Value Statement' in ICU care to facilitate end of life discussion around withdrawal of life support. E-mail: ASchmidt@gbhs.on.ca.

Matthew Stevens, MDiv. I'm a United Methodist Pastor and for the past twelve years I've served as a Navy Chaplain. As a chaplain I've served multiple tours with the Navy and Marine Corps. One of my best memories to date was assisting the Navy in bringing the USS GEORGE H.W. BUSH (CVN77) to life in 2009. I am presently serving as a Chaplain Resident at Naval Medical Center Portsmouth where I'm gaining valuable clinical experience that is expanding my capacity to serve as a chaplain. I am most proud to be married to the Incredible Sheri and to be parenting Christopher, a most amazing 9 year old. (Portsmouth VA). E-mail: Matthew.Stevens2@va.gov.

Katya Stubing. Since my youth I've dedicated myself to the mystical path and went to many types of workshops in the alternative medicine field. During 18 years I was working as a sound engineer for a big studio in São Paulo, Brazil. But an increasing wish to help people reconnect with their spirituality lead me to my graduation in Chinese Medicine and my specialization in Transpersonal Psychology. For the last 7 years I work in my own clinic and last year I've started participating in the research group called ProSer at the Psychiatric Hospital of the São Paulo University, and my research focus is on how spirituality can help people in many different situations. E-mail: ksibele@terra.com.br.

Yoshihiko Sugioka, M.D. I took my undergraduate degree in the Department of Agricultural Science, Kyoto University. Next, I entered Kyoto Prefectural University of Medicine. And I worked for the Hospital of that university as a resident doctor and psychiatrist for two years now. I also studied molecular preventive medicine at the graduate school. Now, I work for Asahikawa Medical College as a lecturer. My interest lies in the philosophy of medicine and mental health. Fortunately, I could translate Dr. Koenig's book into Japanese and published it in 2009. My current interest is establishing a view of a person and to prevail the importance of spirituality in medicine in Japan. E-mail: sugiokay@asahikawa-med.ac.jp.

Capt Jesse R. Tate, M.Div, doctoral cand. Chaplain Tate has nearly 35 years of ministry experience, 28 years of active service in the Navy and 7 years in local parish settings. Serving with Marines on Okinawa, he's a plank owner of the very first CREDO (Chaplain Religious Enrichment Development Operation) retreat program in the United States Marine Corps. Serving at the Force level, CAPT Tate was Command Chaplain for Commander, Navy Installation Command, Fleet Forces Command, and Joint Forces Command. His present duty station is at Portsmouth, Virginia, where he serves as the Command Chaplain for Navy Medicine East and the Naval Medical Center Portsmouth. As the Executive Director for the Navy's largest Pastoral Care Residency training program, our centers would like to become more involved in developing a research arm within the CPE environment. Chaplain Tate is currently a doctoral candidate at Gordon Conwell Theological Seminary with an emphasis in the field of Leadership and Strategic Communications. E-mail: Jessie.Tate@med.navy.mil.

Cynthia Taueg, R.N., MPH, DHA. Dr. Taueg is Vice President of Community Health for St. John Providence Health System where she is responsible for administration of numerous community health programs including 10 school-based health centers, a faith community nurse program serving over 60 churches, health education, two safety net primary care centers, community benefit reporting and a range of other initiatives and partnerships. Cynthia began her career as a registered nurse graduating from Wayne State University with a Bachelor of Science Degree. Subsequently she received a Masters in Public Health from University of Michigan and a Doctorate in Health Administration from Central Michigan University. E-mail: Cynthia.Taueg@stjohn.org.

Joan Thomas APRN, Ph.D., completed her undergraduate education at Vanderbilt University (BSN), her advanced practice psychiatric nursing training (MSN) and health science administration (Ph.D.) education at the University of Tennessee Center for the Health Sciences. She is certified as a psychiatric clinical nurse specialist and serves as an Associate Professor of the Loewenberg School of Nursing, University of Memphis. She is interested in examining religious experiences and Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. Since 2008, 238 American servicemen have made week-long pilgrimages to Lourdes and little is known about outcomes of these pilgrimages. Approximately 200 million people have visited the Lourdes shrine since 1860. E-mail: jthomas1@memphis.edu.

Sandra Thomas, M.D. I'm currently entering my PGY-4 year in Psychiatry. I completed my training in Family Medicine in 2008 and then joined the Psychiatry program at Duke as a PGY-2. Psychiatry has long been my passion and learning about the role of Spirituality in Mental Health has been exciting. I look forward to learning more about this area of Mental Health and the role Spirituality can play in my patients lives especially in regards to improving their mental health. In the future I plan to participate in medical mission work as well as disaster Psychiatry and am excited about what Spirituality and Mental Health research can add to the efforts already being made in these areas. E-mail: sandra.thomas2@duke.edu.

Julie E. Yonker, Ph.D. Julie received her Ph.D. in cognitive, experimental psychology from Stockholm University in 2003 and completed a post-doctoral fellowship in substance abuse at the University of Cincinnati, Department of Psychiatry. Currently, she is an Assistant Professor of Psychology at Calvin College, a comprehensive liberal arts college in the Reformed tradition of historic Christianity. Julie's research includes studies examining biological contributors to cognitive health in the elderly as well as adolescent and emerging adult religious and spiritual development. She hopes to combine these two research interests by investigating the influence of religiosity on cognitive health of older adults. E-mail: jey2@calvin.edu.

August 2010

Prasad Acharya, M.D. Dr. Acharya is currently a first year psychiatry resident training at Duke University. Prior to medical school, Prasad developed a deep interest in factors promoting health and wellbeing. In addition to general psychiatry, Prasad has a particular interest in the interface of psychiatry and spirituality, the health response to stress/psychoneuroendocrinology, integrative medicine/mindfulness, cost-effective system-wide changes focused on promoting health/healthcare utilization issues, and the implementation of technologies to enable comprehensive clinical decision-making and empower deeper patient engagement. E-mail: prasad.acharya@duke.edu

Idowu Adenike. I had my first and second degrees in Sociology in 2007 and 2008 respectively from Covenant University, Nigeria. I am currently an assistant lecturer in my Alma Mater and preparing for my doctoral work this year. My area of specialization is medical sociology and my research interest is primarily on maternal and child health with a focus on the socio-cultural factors that inhibit and/or facilitate access of mothers to modern health facilities. Religion, being an important component of culture in Africa, the spirituality and health workshop will significantly broaden my scope as I prepare to develop my research proposal. E-mail: idowu_adenike@yahoo.com.

Michael Augustson, M.D. Dr. Augustson is a board certified family medicine physician in private practice in Beaver Dam, Wisconsin. On a part-time basis he also serves as the executive director of Church Health Services, Inc., a faith-based nonprofit organization he helped found in 1993. Church Health Services conducts primary clinics for the poor and uninsured, helps develop health ministries in area congregations, and promotes a special health education message to the community at large. Dr. Augustson received a Bachelor of Arts from North Park University and a Doctor of Medicine from Michigan State University College of Human Medicine. He completed his specialty training at the Rush-Christ Family Practice Residency Program and has studied at North Park Theological Seminary. Research interests relate to how a congregation's overall health status can be improved through its commitment to supporting health care services for the poor. This research would study the promise of Isaiah 58 which says that when God's people reach out to the poor and oppressed, he will heal and bless their whole community. E-mail: michaela@churchclinic.org

Kathy F. Berry, MDiv, MS. Rev. Kathy Berry is chaplain to cognitively impaired residents at Westminster Canterbury, a 900 resident continuing care retirement community in Richmond, VA. Previously she served as chaplain for Bon Secours Hospice, The Virginia Home, and The Masonic Home, as an associate pastor, and as editor/writer for numerous publications. For the graduate department in Patient Counseling at Virginia Commonwealth University/Medical College of Virginia Health systems, she teaches Spirituality and Aging. Kathy is also a trainer for the Alzheimers Association. She received a MS inpatient counseling and certificate in aging studies from VCU/MCV, MRE from Southern Seminary in Louisville, Ky., and BS in Communications from VCU. Kathy plans to research and write about the effects of religious rituals, especially music, on the physical, mental, and spiritual health of cognitively impaired individuals. E-mail contact: kathy_berry@wescanric.org.

Paul Borron, Ph.D. Paul currently works for RTI-Health Solutions conducting business development for the Preclinical Pharmaceutical Services Group (North Carolina). Prior to joining RTI, Paul was an NIH-funded investigator studying the mechanism by which different proteins in the body regulate how the immune system works and how inflammation progresses. Paul received his Ph.D. in Biochemistry from The University of Western Ontario in London,

Canada and his Master's in Immunology from The University of Toronto. The research Paul is most interested in focuses on the cellular and molecular mechanisms by which a person's spirituality can impact the function of their immune system and overall health. E-mail: pj263@hotmail.com.

Duane Campbell, M.A. Rev. Campbell is a Counselor in Training and Staff Chaplain Coordinating ministry in the critical care units of The Christ Hospital, Cincinnati, Ohio. He received his BA in Psychology from Miami University (Ohio) and his M. A. in Counseling from Xavier University. He is also an ordained minister with the Assemblies of God. As an educator, counselor, and pastor, Duane has a great interest in understanding the holistic development of the individual, especially related to the development of the individual's spirituality/religion and the impact this has on their decision-making, relationships, and quality of life. E-mail: Duane.Campbell@thechristhospital.com.

Chris Counts. Chris is a student at Colorado State University studying Biomedical Sciences, Anthropology, and Microbiology. He is the founder and director of Hygiene for Humanity, a program that collects and distributes basic hygiene supplies to the underprivileged locally and abroad. He is involved in a research lab investigating the molecular biology of HIV protease. Chris plans on attending medical school, and hopes to be involved in global health. He is interested in developing a model for incorporating spiritual beliefs into third world health care systems. E-mail: cjcounts23@gmail.com.

Thomas Crosby, M.Div., CPE Resident. Thomas is a Chaplain Resident enrolled in Clinical Pastoral Education at the Department of Veterans Affairs Palo Alto Health Care System (VA). He received his Masters in Divinity with a concentration on Spirituality from the Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley, California. Thomas is "in care" with the United Church of Christ and is working toward ordination. His current work efforts include spiritual care of patients in the Intensive Care, Acute Psychiatric, and Addiction Recovery units at the VA. Thomas' project focuses on Veterans with addiction issues and their images of God. This research project idea comes from the spiritual assessments performed with Veterans as they enter an Addiction Recovery program. Before becoming a Chaplain, Thomas managed a technical communications group which was responsible for documentation, training, and web development. E-mail: William.Crosby@va.gov.

Susan Drouilhet, MS, LMT, is a Life and Wellness Coach with a background in Integral Health Care and Energy Medicine. A graduate of Coach University, she has also been a licensed massage therapist since 1992 and holds a Master of Science degree in Energy Medicine (2000). Publications include "Defining Energy Medicine," published (2004) by the International Society for the Study of Subtle Energies and Energy Medicine (ISSSEEM). The research question that Ms. Drouilhet is currently examining concerns the relationship between authenticity and healing: in other words, how does authenticity (e.g., alignment with one's values and life purpose) affect well being? E-mail: suedrou@juno.com.

Kenneth M. Fung, M.D. Dr. Fung obtained his MB, BCh, and BAO degrees from the National University of Ireland in Galway, his specialization training in general surgery from the Royal College of Surgeons, England, and became a Research Fellow in Thoracic Surgery, University of Toronto, in 1972. In 1975 he received his MD from the Medical Council of Canada and The College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario. He then began treating patients in family practice involving Christian Holistic Health Care. Soon he became interested in the relationship between spirituality and illness, and developed a clinical model to explore this area in his practice. Dr. Fung uncovered what he calls a broken spirit and spiritual stress, which needs treatment as much as the body. His research involves exploring the role of internal stress to illness, especially those illnesses that remain mysterious in their etiologies, i.e., fibromyalgia, chronic fatigue syndrome, rheumatoid arthritis, Chrons disease and psychosomatic disorders. E-mail: kenfungcan@sympatico.ca.

Blake A. Gibson. I am pursuing a B.S. in Biomedical Science (University Honors Scholar) and a B.A. in Spanish Language, Literature, and Culture from Colorado State University. I recently worked to establish the first major regional dialogue with health care providers, ministers, and lawmakers on faith and medicine in Colorado. Currently, I am conducting a study related to how chaplain visitation may affect AMI patient recovery. I am also preparing a manuscript for this research project. My future plans are to apply to medical school upon graduation this December. E-mail: bgibson@rams.colostate.edu.

John K. Graham, M.D., D.Min. John is both a physician and a priest. He served 15 years as a plastic surgeon in Shreveport, LA and 15 years as a priest at St. Martin's Episcopal Church in Houston. John retired from active ministry on November 26, 2009 and inn March, 2010, was elected President/CEO of the Institute for Spirituality and Health at the Texas Medical Center (ISH). As to research, Dr. Graham has written some 20 clinical research papers as a physician. At ISH, John has joined with Dr. Elaine Ecklund, PhD at Rice University and are jointly planning to survey the spiritual practices of physicians in the Houston County Medical Society as a pilot study for a larger study of physicians in the United States. He is also interested in surveying how physicians address the spiritual concerns of their patients. E-mail: jgraham@ish-tmc.org.

Jill B. Hamilton, PhD, RN is an Assistant Professor at the School of Nursing. She earned her BSN, MSN, and PhD from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and a BS in Accounting from North Carolina Central University. Her postdoctoral training in the nursing care of older adults was completed at the Oregon Health & Science University. Dr. Hamilton's research interests include health disparities, social and cultural factors that influence health, and the coping strategies used among older African American cancer survivors. Dr. Hamilton's publications focus on social support, spirituality, and quality of life among African American cancer survivors. E-mail: jhamilto@email.unc.edu.

Mary Ann Hegner, MDiv. Mary is a chaplain serving the Blood and Marrow Unit at Cincinnati Children's Hospital. She conducted a pilot study to assess the spiritual experiences of parents on the Blood and Marrow Unit (BMT) as part of her graduate work to obtain her master's degree in Religious Studies from the College of Mt. St. Joseph. That study sparked her interest in research as a way to develop best practices for professional chaplains. She is currently collaborating on a study to understand the spiritual needs of adolescent BMT patients in order to develop interventions that will better serve that population. E-mail: Maryann.hegner@cchmc.org.

Pam S. Jenkins, R.N. Pamela is a nurse with a BA in Communications, Hope College, Holland, MI. Stevens Minister and 2 years Board of Director Member of the Caristis Spiritis Center, Boulder Colorado. Working with Centura (Centura.org), a faith based, Colorado Health Care System, her interests in research are faith/spirituality and dementia. Those individuals with a life history of faith/spiritual maturity, experience Alzheimer Disease differently than those individuals without a faith/spiritual process. Where does "faith" reside in an individual with Alzheimer's? Working with the spiritual health of an individual with dementia, promotes a well being within the disease process. She has presented on both the spiritual expression, and a spiritual skills set designed while working directly with this population. E-mail: pm_jnkns@yahoo.com .

Tom Jensen, M.D., M.Div. Dr. Jensen attended seminary at the Church of God Theological Seminary where he was ordained in the Church of God and where he obtained a MDiv. He attended medical school at ETSU and is currently a 3rd year resident at the Duke Psychiatry Residency program. His research interests are conceptual in nature, asking the question, "What does it mean to be human?" He would also like to address the entities that dehumanize individuals, communities, and societies and which may lead to the pathology of mental illness. He would like to use the imago dei as a platform to engage this topic and eventually introduce new therapy techniques to address the deficits in how we address people in spiritual terms. E-mail: thomas.jensen@duke.edu.

Michihiro Kawasaki. My name is Mitch Kawasaki and I am trained as an energy healing therapist of Okada Purifying Therapy. In the past 20 years, I have been stationed in the MOA offices in Hawaii, Los Angeles and New York to share the philosophy and practice Mokichi Okada with American people. As we are making efforts of documenting the results of Okada Wellness Program over different symptoms, I am interested in learning the research schemes over the issues of medicine, health and religion. E-mail: m.Kawasaki@panamoa.org.

Hyun Jung Kim, M.D. I'm in psychiatry residency training at Duke. I am originally from Seoul, South Korea, where I spent most of my lifetime including my childhood and school years. I have hardcore Catholic parents as well as a nun sister who's studying theology in Rome, I guess this background has raised my personal interest in the area of theology/religion/ spirituality consciously and unconsciously throughout my life. As far as research, I am starting at the very naive level at this point and do not have a specific research question yet. I am so excited about this new learning opportunity. E-mail: hyunjung.kim@duke.edu.

Brian Kleyensteuber, MD. Lieutenant Commander Kleyensteuber is currently serving as the chief psychiatry resident at the U.S. Naval Medical Center in San Diego. He is a graduate of the US Military Academy, West Point, NY. After serving in the US Army as a diving officer in the Army Corps of Engineers, he briefly attended Fuller Theological Seminary to help discern a calling between full-time ministry and medicine. He is a recent graduate of the Loyola University of Chicago Stritch School of Medicine. Dr. Kleyensteuber is interested in the stages of psycho-spiritual development and its relationship to one's mental and physical health. E-mail: Brian.Kleyensteuber@med.navy.mil.

Marianne Nilsen Kvande, doctoral cand. Marianne is in PhD training at the Department of Social Work and Health Science, and Research Centre for Health Promotion and Resources at The Norwegian University of Technology and Science (NTNU) in Norway since 2008. She finished her Master Thesis at the Department of Psychology, NTNU in 2005 with the title “Religiosity and Well Being in The Norwegian Public”. Her current project focuses on religion and health; the matter of religion for staying healthy, and coping with illness. E-mail: marianne.n.kvande@gmail.com.

Ruth E. Loyer, R.N. Ruth is originally from York, PA and attended The College of William & Mary, where she majored in Kinesiology and Music. She received her B.S. in Nursing from Johns Hopkins University and is now working towards Master of Science in Nursing and Master of Theological Studies dual degrees from Duke University School of Nursing and Divinity School. She currently works as an R.N. in Radiation Oncology at Duke University Medical Center. She is a candidate for ordained ministry in The United Methodist Church and has research interests in the intersections of faith, healing, and holistic healthcare. E-mail: ruth.loyer@duke.edu.

Prof Matsobane Jacob Manala, DTh. Associate Professor in the Department of Practical Theology at the University of South Africa (UNISA). My doctoral thesis obtained from UNISA was on “The church’s healing ministry in a black South African context.” I am interested in health and well being as a holistic category. I am also serving as a minister in a black congregation in one of South Africa’s poor townships where the church is seen as an agent of God’s total liberation. E-mail address: manalmj@unisa.ac.za.

Dr. Christina Marino. Christina is a Doctor of Acupuncture and Chinese medicine. She is a California Board License Acupuncturist and Chinese herbalist. She holds a doctor’s degree from the Oregon College of Oriental medicine, and received her Master’s from Emperor’s College of Traditional Chinese medicine in Santa Monica in 1994. In private practice since 1994, Christina previously served as a member of Vie Magazine's Health Advisory Board, authoring numerous articles and lecturing frequently on Chinese Medicine & Alternative Therapies. She also appeared on Extra as a featured guest in the daily program "Good Medicine." Christina studied through the Foundation of Shamanic Studies to learn from the well known Michael Hamer and Alicia Gates, then trained with indigenous shamans in the Peruvian Amazon. Christina honed her skills under the guidance of the top medical intuitives in the country, Carolyn Myss and Norm Shealy. E-mail: ChristinaMarino@aol.com.

Mark McIntyre, MDiv, BCC. Mark is currently an APC board certified chaplain serving in the Palliative Care Program at Mease Countryside and Mease Dunedin Hospitals in Florida since 2008. Previous to his work in the acute care setting, Chaplain McIntyre has served many hospice organizations. Before chaplaincy training he served pastorates in Missouri and Florida. He is a graduate of Concordia Seminary, St. Louis. Currently, he is an ELCA minister endorsed for Specialize Pastoral Care ministry. After attending a chaplains’ retreat with Dr. Koenig as presenter, Mark was inspired to learn more about research in health, medicine, and spirituality. He hopes to explore research possibilities regarding spirituality and palliative care. E-mail: mmac618@yahoo.com.

Daphna McKnight. I am a Ph.D. student in Buddhist Studies at University of the West (Los Angeles) with an M.A. in Comparative Religions, an M. Ed. in Curriculum and Instruction, and a BA in Psychology. I am especially interested in studying the efficacy of various spiritual practices to enhance the mental, physical, and/or social well being in the general population. I have been a Peace Corps Volunteer, trained teachers, taught English, developed various educational and training programs, and trained the trainers in Corporate America. I lived and worked at a Buddhist retreat center, traveled, and enjoyed my life. E-mail contact: windinhair13dd@aim.com.

Deborah Morgan, MDiv, BCC. I am an ordained Elder in the United Methodist Church currently serving in the Department of Pastoral Services at Duke Hospital as manager under the leadership of our director Jim Rawlings. I have my Master of Divinity from Duke and am a Board Certified Chaplain in the Association of Professional Chaplains. I am also a Licensed Professional Counselor in the state of North Carolina. My areas of clinical expertise and interest include offering spiritual care with older adults, persons living with cancer, surgery and trauma patients, and adult palliative care. E-mail: morga016@mc.duke.edu.

Marci Morgenlander, M.D. Dr. Morgenlander graduated from University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, and trained at Duke University Medical Center in Pediatrics. She currently works at Accent Urgent Care in Durham, NC. E-mail: mmorgenlander@nc.rr.com.

Joanne Mumley, M.Div. Joanne is completing her Masters of Divinity at Asbury Theological Seminary in Orlando, Florida. She completed four (4) units of Clinical Pastoral Education towards Board Certification in Chaplain Care. Joanne holds a Bachelors of Religion from Liberty University. She has worked in Occupational Therapy for 25 yrs. Joanne attends the Cathedral Church of St. Luke. Research interests: R/S in following areas-Recovery during Physical Rehabilitation, Education in Allied Health, ALFs/Long Term Care, Trauma and Neurology, Disaster Care, Healthcare System Partnership with Congregations, Parish Health Programs, Mechanisms of R/S Benefits, Narrative Theology and Therapy, Chaplaincy Evidence-Based Research and Bioethics. E-mail: jod777@aol.com.

Isaac M.T. Mwase, PhD, MPH, MBA, MDiv. Dr. Mwase is a Cancer Prevention Fellow at the NCI with the Basic and Biobehavioral Research Branch, of the Behavioral Research Program, within the Division of Cancer Control and Population Sciences. He served on the faculty at Ouachita Baptist University (OBU), 1994-2004 and at Tuskegee University, 2004-2008. While at OBU, Mwase also taught Medical Ethics to medical students at the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences. Mwase's MPH is from the Johns Hopkins University. Research interests include faith and health, social determinants of health and health disparities, research ethics, and the ethics of prioritization. E-mail: mwaseim@mail.nih.gov.

Rev. Annette Olsen, MDiv, BCC. Annette is a member of Duke Pastoral Services at Duke University Medical Center & Children's Hospital in Durham, NC. She serves as Senior Chaplain and Spiritual Care Manager for Neurosciences, Women's, and Children's Services. Certified through the Association of Professional Chaplains, she currently serves on their Publications Task force and maintains her faith group endorsement through the United Church of Christ. Her previous career was social work (psychiatric), and, recently she completed an Integrative

HealthCoach training program through Duke Integrative Medicine. Primary interests are (1) spiritual health & stress management, and (2) spiritual care models/pathways/tools for professional healthcare chaplaincy (particularly approaches to clinical pastoral care & referral pathways in public multi-faith settings, culture-specific chaplaincy care, and practitioner-based spiritual care training). E-mail: olsen007@mc.duke.edu.

Raja Paulraj, M.D. Dr. Paulraj is from South India. He completed the psychiatry residency at Christian Medical College in Vellore, India. Dr. Raja is currently serving as a missionary doctor in Northeast India, in the state of Assam. He is heading a 70-bed mission hospital among the indigenous people of Assam. The majority of the patient population is from impoverished tribal regions in NE India. He is pioneering a mental health program that incorporates the Body-Mind-Spirit model at Burrows Memorial Christian Hospital in Assam. Dr. Raja is the only psychiatrist within Emmanuel Hospital Association, which has a total of 20 hospitals throughout India. His research interests vary between spirituality, psychiatry, rural mental health, and prison psychiatry. E-mail: rajafellowship@gmail.com.

Kathleen S. Peindl, MS, PhD. Dr. Peindl is an Assistant Research Professor in the Department of Psychiatry at Duke University Medical Center. Her current position is with both Duke University and as a consultant at SouthLight, Inc. She conducted research in women's mental health as a Project Coordinator and as a Co-Investigator in research on cocaine and opioid dependence with The National Institute of Drug Abuse. She was a Fellow for the National Institute of Alcohol and Alcoholism at the University of Pittsburgh. Dr. Peindl is a member of The American Association of Public Health, Spiritual Directors International and Public Health Service Corps. E-mail: kathi.peindl@duke.edu.

Jane Peterson, PhD, RN, ARNP. Dr. Peterson is an Assistant Professor at the University of Missouri Kansas City where she is involved in teaching PhD Nursing courses and conducting health promotion research. Dr. Peterson is an experienced Family Nurse Practitioner and maintains an active clinical practice in an urban primary care setting. She was an invited member of the United Methodist Health Ministry Fund (UMHMF) and University of Kansas Medical Center, Kansas Area Advisory Committee Task Force to utilize a "community development" approach to promote healthy eating and physical activity for congregations and their communities. Dr. Peterson is an Active Living Every Day provider, trained at the Cooper Institute in Dallas, Texas. She developed the Heart and Soul Physical Activity Program, a spiritual-based health promotion program for women. E-mail: peterstonja@umkc.edu.

Judy Ragsdale, M.Div, Ph.D. Judy is the Director for Education and Research in Pastoral Care at Cincinnati Children's Hospital Medical Center. She has been a supervisor certified by the Association for Clinical Pastoral Education since 1990. Her dissertation study, Educating Clinical Pastoral Education Supervisors: A Grounded Theory Study of Supervisory Wisdom was published by the Journal of Pastoral Care and Counseling in 2009. Her interests include continuing this research and also researching how adolescents and young adults use spirituality and religion in the course of receiving a Blood and Marrow Transplant. She, her partner, and their menagerie live in Cincinnati, Ohio. E-mail: Judy.Ragsdale@cchmc.org.

Jose Ribas, M.D. Jose Antonio was born and raised in Guayaquil, Ecuador where he attended medical school at Universidad Catolica de Santiago de Guayaquil. He then joined a vocational experience with the jesuits and became part of St. Ignatius Novitiate for 9 months. During this time he became more interested in the connection between spirituality and health. Currently he is PGY-2 Psychiatry resident at Duke University Medical Center. His interests include Global Health, Spirituality, Child and Adolescence Psychiatry and LGBT issues. E-mail: jose.ribas@duke.edu.

David H. Rosmarin, Ph.D. David is a postdoctoral fellow in the Department of Psychiatry at McLean Hospital/ Harvard Medical School. He completed his doctoral studies in Clinical Psychology at Bowling Green State University under the mentorship of Dr. Kenneth I. Pargament. David has published over 10 peer-reviewed publications on the relationship of religion/spirituality to symptoms of affective disorders. He is also the founder and director of JPSYCH, an on-line laboratory conducting psychological research on Jewish religiousness and spirituality (see www.jpsych.com). David's current research focuses on the integration of religion/spirituality into empirically supported treatments for anxiety and related disorders. E-mail: DHROSMARIN@PARTNERS.ORG.

Lucy Selman. I have been working as a Research Associate in the Department of Palliative Care, Policy & Rehabilitation at King's College London, UK, since July 2005. I am currently in the last year of a doctoral degree exploring spiritual well being in patients with incurable, progressive disease in South Africa and Uganda. Prior to moving into social sciences research I studied philosophy, and have an MPhil. in Philosophy of Science. My current research interests include the provision of culturally sensitive spiritual care within the healthcare context. I am also qualified yoga teacher interested in meditation and mind-body therapies. E-mail: lucy.selman@kcl.ac.uk.

Rev. Amy Snow, M.Div., BCC. Amy is an ordained Presbyterian P.C.U.S.A Pastor and a Board Certified Chaplain. In her current position Amy is working solely in research supporting a number of projects in the area of religious coping and health. Amy has more than seven years clinical experience as a staff chaplain working with diverse patient populations from patients with chronic pulmonary conditions to adult and pediatric intensive care patients, neonatal intensive care patients and as a part of an interdisciplinary palliative care team. Amy is passionate about moving pastoral care to an evidence based practice and research is integral to that goal. E-mail: amy.snow@cchmc.org.

Yoshihiko Sugioka, M.D. I took my undergraduate degree in the Department of Agricultural Science, Kyoto University. Next, I entered Kyoto Prefectural University of Medicine. And I worked for the Hospital of that university as a resident doctor and psychiatrist for two years now. I also studied molecular preventive medicine at the graduate school. Now, I work for Asahikawa Medical College as a lecturer. My interest lies in the philosophy of medicine and mental health. Fortunately, I could translate Dr. Koenig's book into Japanese and published it in 2009. My current interest is establishing a view of a person and to prevail the importance of spirituality in medicine in Japan. E-mail: sugiokay@asahikawa-med.ac.jp.

Kiyoshi Suzuki, M.D. Dr. Suzuki was trained as Pediatric cardiologist and worked for a heart medical center in Japan for 15 years. Due to his interest in physical, mental and spiritual well-being of the patients, he has been studying the efficacy of MOA's health promotion program (bio-energy healing, art therapy and diet) for about 8 years. Then, he became the president of MOA Health Science Foundation in 2003. He would like to obtain the following information through the workshop; 1) methods to evaluate one's spirituality and religiousness, respectively, 2) how to collaborate with religious and/or other groups when your patients wish spiritual/religious care, and 3) how to develop a method to evaluate one's spirituality/religiousness, particularly for Japanese people and for international surveys among countries with different religious and cultural backgrounds. E-mail: k.Suzuki@mhs.or.jp.

Prof Jacques PJ Theron, DTh. Jacques trained as a minister at the University of Pretoria in South Africa. He ministered for seven years and then entered academic life in 1982. At present he is the Chair (Acting) of the Department of Practical Theology at the University of South Africa. He has a keen interest in the churches' ministries of healing and exorcism and has published in these areas. He is also the leader of the department's research projects on "Religion, health and well-being in southern Africa: practical theological perspectives" and on "Pentecostal churches and Charismatic movements". E-mail: Therojbj@unisa.ac.za.

Rev. Leanne M. Wade. Leanne is an ordained minister in the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) and a board certified music therapist. Currently her position is manager of the Rehabilitation Department for San Joaquin County Behavioral Health Services on the locked inpatient unit. She also serves the United Congregational Christian Church in Lodi, California as non-paid staff. Her research interests include looking at what words and music psychiatric patients consider spiritual. As their facility shifts into a wellness model, she wants to examine how to include spirituality and religion in the rehabilitative process to address the whole person. E-mail: musicleanne@hotmail.com.

Edward J.(Ted) Ward BScF. A graduate of the University of Toronto, Ted holds a graduate level diploma in Christian Studies from Wycliffe College, UofT. He occupied executive positions in the Canadian government dealing with international trade and technology development in the resource based industries. While in business he led the development of the Alpha Course across Canada. For ten years, he and his wife Carol have run the School of Healing Prayer in Toronto. As President of Christian Healing Associates, he is working toward the development of an integrated centre for Christian healing bringing together the skills of health care professionals and the practice of healing prayer providing a basis for research and communications in the field. Ted is an active member of ACT. E-mail: teward@idirect.com.

Kristi LC Wilkum, doctoral cand. Kristi is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Communication at Purdue University. Her primary interest is in the role family and interpersonal relationships play in helping an individual cope with a long-term, disruptive loss. More specifically her research attempts to identify the message, individual and situational characteristics that produce effective forms of support. Kristi's primary lines of research have focused on the role of religion in comforting messages and support after miscarriage. E-mail: kwilkum@purdue.edu.

David Y. Wong, M.D. Dr. Wong is a graduate of Loma Linda University Medical School, and is a family physician who integrates wellness and mindfulness into his practice. He co-founded in 1978 the Health Integration Center in California that offers preventative healthcare and education, nutrition, acupuncture, osteopathy, energy healing, various structural therapies and longevity programs. He is medical director of the Los Angeles MOA Wellness Center. He writes frequently on spa and wellness topics and published his book, Healing What Hurts in 2007. E-mail: DavidYWongMD@aol.com.