

2012 Duke Spirituality & Health Research Class (August)

Heidi Alexander, BS, MScMed. I hold a Bachelor of Science degree in Biology from The University of Michigan. My professional background is in laboratory medicine, working as a Medical Technologist and as a Laboratory Manager, in laboratory and hospital settings. I have a Master of Science in Medicine degree as a Physician Assistant from Western Michigan University. I have practiced in family medicine, internal medicine, pediatrics and dermatology. I am currently a full-time PhD student at Western Michigan University in the Interdisciplinary Health Sciences program. My research interest is in prayer and health and I am in the very early stages of preparing to pursue this research for my dissertation. I also have a research interest in malaria. I have participated in short-term medical mission trips to Sierra Leone, Ghana, Tanzania, the Philippines, Brazil, and Russia. E-mail: halex1@frontier.com.

Linda E. Benavides, MSW, Ph.D. Linda E. Benavides has an undergraduate degree in Psychology from Sul Ross State University and a Master's of Science in Social Work from the University of Texas at Austin. Dr. Benavides has several years of practice experience as a Licensed Master Social Worker, working with diverse populations across diverse settings. In 2009, she obtained her Doctorate of Philosophy in Social Work from the University of Texas at Arlington. Dr. Benavides is currently an Assistant Professor at the University of Texas at San Antonio, Department of Social Work. Her research interests include spirituality, family violence, children and adolescents, resiliency, and protective factors. E-mail: Linda.Benavides@utsa.edu.

Jeff Bernard, M.Div. I am a US Army Chaplain (4yrs) having served as primary chaplain support for the busiest Aid Station in Afghanistan. I graduated from Kent State University with a B.A. in English and from Ashland Theological School with an MDiv. From 2000-2007, I worked in a mainline Protestant denomination. In 2007, I was ordained by the Evangelical Church Alliance and received a commission to be a chaplain in the US Army. I have practiced tai chi/qigong for 14 years and have read over 150 books (all of which I own) on pertaining subjects. I have not been able to institutionally train in tai chi/qigong due to proximity in employment, however, I should be able to attain certification in this field within a year. My research interests include developing Christian Pneumalism (CP): a self-developed affirmation, study, and employment of life-force energy (LFE) within a Christian spiritual and theological environment. E-mail: jbernard1967@gmail.com.

Tiana Blackburn, M.A. I am working towards a doctorate in psychology in Santa Barbara, and just finished my second year in the Psy.D. program at Antioch University (AUSB). The focus is on family psychology and forensics, which is a career change since I have worked in aerospace for 25 years during which time I obtained two other graduate degrees in depth psychology and the integration of eastern and western approaches to health. My research interest is in exploring what faith means in the lives of psychotherapists. I suggest that faith provides emotional support and is a route to meaning which can help therapists cope with the stress of clinical practice. The study is planned to be qualitative/quantitative, using EEG and various other measures. In addition, my practicum is at an agency that provides mental health care to low-income families in my community. E-mail: tblackburn@antioch.edu.

K Brewer-Smyth, PhD, RN. Associate Professor with Tenure, University of Delaware. I study neurological, neuroendocrine, and neuropsychological correlates of high risk behaviors in adults. I measured childhood abuse to statistically control for it when evaluating neuroendocrine function. Unfortunately I found childhood abuse to be a very serious prevalent problem that is significantly related to numerous adverse conditions and behaviors in adults. Apart from Divine intervention, I am not sure how to address sequelae of childhood abuse. I completed a Postdoctoral Research Fellowship (NIH T32 NR07036); PhD in Nursing with fields of study in Epidemiology, Forensics, and Neuroscience; and Master of Science in Neuroscience Nursing all at the University of Pennsylvania. E-mail: kbsmyth@udel.edu.

Martha Brown, MDiv. Martha S. Brown is a board certified chaplain currently employed as a staff chaplain at Vidant Medical Center in Greenville, North Carolina. Martha an ordained United Church of Christ minister has been a chaplain for eight years. She currently is assigned to the medicine division and palliative care. She also serves on the following community boards, End of Life Care Coalition of ENC Inc., and the Lucille Gorham Intergenerational Center which allows her additional ministry opportunities. Martha is interested in research which examines the contributions of chaplains in palliative care. E-mail: Martha.Brown@vidanthealth.com.

Jonathan Butler. Jonathan obtained his Bachelor of Business Administration in Marketing from Texas Southern University in Houston Texas. He obtained his Master of Divinity from Howard University School of Divinity and is obtaining a Doctor in Philosophy in Medical Sociology and Social Inequality at Howard. His research interest includes: religion, theology, health, stress, and race and ethnicity. He is currently a research graduate assistant in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Howard. Along with teaching, Jonathan plans to be a consultant for churches to establish a comprehensive health ministry that will: identify and train lay ministers of churches as "Healthy Connectors" who will share health information with members of their congregations, identify congregational health needs, and develop activities to address those needs. E-mail: jzmb@me.com.

Mattie Burton, PhD, RN, NEA-BC. Dr. Burton has served the people of central Appalachia in a number of roles in her 40 years as a nurse. Clinically, her experiences range from bedside nursing on medical-surgical units to a variety of community health roles. Many of her roles have been in management where she has enjoyed leading and mentoring young nurses. Following completion of the doctoral degree at the University of Cincinnati, Dr. Burton has served administratively in academia, presently at Shawnee State University in southeastern Ohio. There, in keeping with current research interests, she has recently been charged with developing a Center for Spirituality and Health. E-mail: mburton2352@yahoo.com.

Gena Cline, MFA, MDiv. Gena is the graduate academic advisor and CPE coordinator for Religious Studies at Naropa University. She is a Buddhist practitioner in the Tibetan tradition of the Longchen Nyintig and an instructor of mindfulness meditation. In examining the common condition called "terminal agitation," a pre-death state of anxiety and confusion, Gena's research interest is to analyze the effects of Buddhist contemplative practice in the context of palliative and hospice care. Moreover, in collaboration with MDiv faculty, students, and colleagues, she hopes to develop a program of research at Naropa to examine the role of contemplative spiritual practices in healthcare. E-mail: gcline@naropa.edu.

Larry Crapse. Larry has extensive experience as an educator and is a three-time recipient of the Time-Warner STAR Teacher Award. He has been a high school teacher and department head, an elementary and middle school administrator, and a district-level supervisor and coordinator. He has also been an adjunct professor at three universities. A published writer, he has been an editorial advisor for companies and journals. He is a graduate of the University of South Carolina and The Citadel and has certificates from New York University and Harvard University. Currently serving as Project Consultant for Le Creuset of America, Inc., his research interests include the role of faith in managing chronic illnesses, in dealing with dementia, and in working with caregivers. E-mail: lcrapse@lecreuset.com.

Christy Daffron. My interest in research is focused on the impact that various holistic interventions have on promoting positive outcomes related to spirituality. I have been involved in health ministry since 1993 and have long seen first-hand the unquestionable impact that holistic interventions offered by faith community nurses can have on parishioners and the community. As a graduate student in the Doctor of Nursing Program at Samford University in Birmingham, Alabama, my desire is to conduct research that will demonstrate a positive correlation between faith community nurse interventions and positive outcomes. I am a nursing instructor at Jefferson State Community College in Pell City, Alabama. I also have been a hospice nurse for 12 years and currently work on-call for a nonprofit, faith-based community hospice in Pell City. E-mail: cristydaffron@yahoo.com.

Alison T. DeLeo, PT, DPT, NREMT-B. I am an Assistant Professor, George Washington University School of Medicine and Health Sciences, Department of Physical Therapy and Health Sciences. I obtained my doctor of physical therapy from Temple University (2003), master of physical therapy from University of Delaware, and bachelor of science in psychology from Duke University. My research interests are: What is the overall health status of seminary students? How knowledgeable are seminary students about general health indicators? How knowledgeable are they regarding their own health status? How does health status change during seminary education? What health resources, interests, attitudes and barriers do seminarians identify as impacting their health during seminary studies? What are the predictors of good health status during seminary? E-mail: atdeleo@gwu.edu.

Rev Martisha Dwyer. I am currently the Emergency Department and Community Chaplain for Robert Wood Johnson University Hospital in New Brunswick, NJ. In this position, I establish and maintain relationships with community clergy and agencies to provide referrals and supportive linkages for chronic users of emergency department resources. I hold a Bachelors of Science from the Bloustein School of Public Policy and Planning of Rutgers the State University. I have completed the Chaplain Residency program at Robert Wood Johnson Hospital in 2011; and I will receive my Master's of Theology in Pastoral Care and Counseling in December 2012 from the New Brunswick Theological Seminary. My research interests include: the power of faith in promoting wellness and health education in communities; God and medicine: the role and response of faith leaders during the dying process. E-mail: Martisha.Dwyer@rwjuh.edu.

Patrick Shawn Finn, CDR, CHC, USN, M DIV, is Program Manager for Strategic Development of Religious Ministry for all Navy serving in combat zones worldwide. Before being recalled to active duty with United States Fleet Forces Command, Fr. Pat, an Episcopal Priest, served as Senior Pastor of Churches in Alexandria, VA, Park City, Utah and Charleston, SC. He has extensive experience in healing missions and parish and community development. His undergraduate degree and graduate work in Community Development are from the University of Michigan. His theological education was at Weston, Harvard and Episcopal Divinity School, Cambridge MA, where he received his M Div. He has developed a program for the Navy called “Spiritual Resiliency” which partners with the Navy’s Combat Operational Stress Model. His desire is to research practical methods to connect our military with the religious concepts of prayer/meditation/mindfulness and forgiveness. E-mail: frpatrick@bellsouth.net.

Pamela Payne Foster, M.D. Pamela received her MD from Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tennessee and her Preventive Medicine/Public Health Training at State University of New York at Stony Brook where she also received her MPH from Columbia School of Public Health. She currently serves as Deputy Director for the Institute for Rural Health Research at the University Of Alabama School of Medicine, Tuscaloosa campus and Associate Professor (08/01/12) in the Department of Community and Rural Medicine. Her current research interests include HIV/AIDS stigma in African Americans in the rural Deep South using faith-based approaches and interventions. E-mail: ppayne-foster@cchs.ua.edu.

Larimar Fuentes. E-mail: larimarfuentes@gmail.com.

Jessyka Glatz, MA. Jessyka holds a BS in Elementary Education and a Masters in German. She has taught English as a second language and German as a foreign language both in the United States and in Germany. Her interests in education and health have brought her to Duke University where she is currently a Clinical Trials Coordinator in the department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences. She is interested in how religion and spirituality is a motivating force for improved learning, better health outcomes, and enhanced coping skills when facing life’s stresses and traumas. She is especially interested in how clinical trials outcomes in the areas of religion and spirituality have been translated into current psychological and medical practices. E-mail: essyka.glatz@dm.duke.edu.

Bryan Hatcher, MDiv, LCSW, ACC. As ordained clergy and Licensed Clinical Social Worker, Bryan is a practitioner with a passion for integrating theology, behavioral health and wellness. His career began as a pastor in local congregations and since 1999 he has served as a psychotherapist in a faith-integrated statewide counseling system. Most recently, he has provided leadership in developing educational, wellness, co-location, tele-behavioral health services, and healthcare leadership programs for Wake Forest Baptist Health and its subsidiary, CareNet Counseling. Attempting to integrate a deeper level of research into his work, initial interests lie in measurable patient/client outcomes relative to level spiritual-integration of care provided, educational outcomes for various clinical training programs. E-mail: bhatcher@wakehealth.edu.

Tracy Higgins. Having spent a government career overseas in security and intelligence, and now as a PhD student in Nursing, I am interested in disease prevention strategies in Global Health. In designing culturally competent prevention strategies, understanding how healthcare is informed by the R/S dimension is critical. My short term dissertation focus is hepatitis screening and prevention in the Senegalese community in Harlem, and longer term goal is fighting malaria throughout sub Saharan Africa. My interest was inspired by my work in central Africa, my study of Teilhard de Chardin, and my course in Narrative Medicine. E-mail: tracyhiggins17@yahoo.com.

Jim W. Jasper, D. Min. has been a chaplain with Cleveland Clinic Hospice at Home for 15 years. A Lutheran pastor (MAR, Concordia, Ft. Wayne) he completed a CPE residency at the Cleveland Clinic preceding that position. Jim served in Lutheran parishes as a pastor, teacher, musician (BME, Valparaiso Univ.), and composer with emphasis on sacred choral literature and jazz liturgies. Jim's doctoral work (St. Mary SGST, Wickliffe, OH), "Kenosis in Hospice Patients and the Effects of Educating Their Caregivers," developed a paradigm, etiology and pathology of the individual's spiritual life, growth and suffering. Current research interests focus on the function and contextualization of the spiritual or faith life in end-of-life care. E-mail: pastorjazzper@roadrunner.com.

Aaron Klink, M.Div. Aaron Klink is Chaplain and Bereavement Coordinator at Amedisys Hospice in Durham, North Carolina. I received an MAR in Theology from the Lutheran Theological Seminary in Philadelphia an MDiv from Yale where I interned at Yale's Interdisciplinary Bioethics Center before heading south for a Th.M. in Ethics at Duke Divinity School in Conjunction with the Institute for Care at the End of Life. Before starting with Amedisys I did CPE Residencies at Yale New Haven Hospital and at the VA Medical Center in Durham, where I focused on inpatient psychiatry. My research interests focus on how individuals use faith resources to heal from trauma, the role of religion in end of life decision making, narrative medicine, and ways clinicians engage patients religious concerns and language. E-mail: aaron.klink@amedisys.com.

Joan Kub, Ph.D., M.Th., M.S.N. Joan is an Associate Professor at Johns Hopkins University with a primary appointment in the School of Nursing and joint appointments in the Bloomberg School of Public Health and JHU School of Medicine. She is trained as a behavioral scientist (PhD from the Bloomberg School of Public Health) and advanced public health nurse (Masters in Public Health Nursing). She also earned a Masters of Theology from St Mary's Seminary-Ecumenical Institute in Baltimore. She currently coordinates the MSN/MPH program at JHU. Her research is focused on vulnerable populations experiencing public health problems (substance use, violence, asthma and/or end of life), and she has a particular interest in understanding the role of spirituality and health for these groups. E-mail: jkubl@jhu.edu.

Sungshim Lee, MA. Rev Lee was ordained in 2008 as a Won-Buddhist minister. She completed her undergraduate degree at Wonkwang University and her MA at the Won Institute of Graduate Studies. Before she ordained, Rev. Lee worked as a special education teacher and a vocational rehabilitation counselor. Since 2010, she has been serving as a minister at the Miami Won-Buddhist temple. She leads Dharma services, meditation and yoga classes, and offers counseling and guidance to practitioners. Her research interests include examining the relationship between mind and body from an eastern Buddhist perspective and western psychology. Her recent research investigates the positive impact spiritual practice has on the elderly and argues that a happier and healthier life closely correlates with mind practice. E-mail: activebuddha@yahoo.com.

Kenneth R. Lowther, M.Div., BCC. Education: Board Certified by APC in 2007. 2003 M.Div. from Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary, Wake Forest, NC. CPE Residency at Yale-New Haven Hospital, New Haven, CT 2003-2004. 2004 – Present, Chaplain at The Wexner Medical Center at The Ohio State University with primary placement at the Arthur G. James Hospital and Richard Solove Research Institute. As part of my work at the James, I serve as the chaplain for the Center for Palliative Care. Doing research to improve accessibility and quality improvement of spiritual care for our patient's has become a personal interest and priority. E-mail: Kenneth.Lowther@osumc.edu.

Iris Mamier, PhD, MSN, RN. I completed my undergraduate nursing education at the University of Heidelberg School of Nursing (1991). My master's in nursing education is from Humboldt University Berlin/Germany (1998) and my PhD in nursing (2009) from Loma Linda University. The title my dissertation is: Nurses' spiritual care practices: Assessment, types, frequencies and correlates. The study surveyed 554 RNs working across different specialties in tertiary acute care and explored how often they had used 17 different spiritual care interventions in the last 72-80 hours at work. Besides demographic and work place related data nurses' spiritual profile was explored using the DUREL and the Daily Spiritual Experience Scale. I'm interested in expanding a research track in the area of spirituality and nursing. E-mail: IMamier@llu.edu.

Amber McCall, PhD, FNP, RN. Amber is a recent doctoral graduate of Georgia Health Sciences University (GHSU) and is currently an assistant professor at GHSU in the Clinical Nurse Leader program. Clinical areas of expertise include critical care, medical/surgical and hospice/end-of-life care. Her research interests include faith-based health initiatives and interventions, and understanding health decision-making, as well as the role of faith in health decision-making among women of faith. She lives in Grovetown, Georgia and has recently completed her Family Nurse Practitioner certification summer 2012, with plans to continue clinically relevant research. E-mail: amccall@georgiahealth.edu.

Clayton McClintock, MTS. Clayton has a background in Christian theology and Buddhist philosophy as well as psychological and health sciences, and currently serves as a research assistant at the Langer Mindfulness Psychology Laboratory at Harvard and the Benson-Henry Institute for Mind-Body Medicine at Massachusetts General Hospital. His research interests include the effect of contemplative training upon stress-related disease, resilience, and well-being. Having just completed an MTS in religion and psychology at Harvard Divinity School, he plans to pursue a degree in clinical psychology. E-mail: clayton.mcclintock@gmail.com.

Keisha-Mechell Ward. Keisha is currently a Ministry student specializing in Clinical Pastoral Counseling who enjoys health promotion and community participatory research. As a former Health/Human Services Administrator, she discovered a deep interest in the clinical and societal applications of Sociology, Epidemiology and Psychiatry. Earning a B.S. from Texas Woman's University and a M.S. from the University of Texas at Dallas, she is also the recipient of several grants, fellowships and honors including the Golden Key International Honour Society and the Emerging Leaders in Public Health Fellowship (ELPH) from, UNC at Chapel Hill. Dedicated to pre-doctoral guidance, reflective writing and progressive research this semester, Keisha aspires to conduct research to advance the importance of integrated health in veteran, rehabilitative and geriatric care. E-mail: kmechell@sbcglobal.net

Lynda K. Middleton, MDiv, chaplain. I currently serve as the Catholic chaplain at Miami Valley Hospital in Dayton, Ohio. I have a BS in biology and chemistry from Wilmington College, an MDiv from United Theological Seminary and an MA from the University of Cincinnati. I did my Clinical Pastoral Education at Nebraska Methodist Hospital, Omaha, Nebraska. My current interests include working with students in the Lay Pastoral Ministry Program for the Archdiocese of Cincinnati and investigating the place that giving and receiving forgiveness has in generating and maintaining good physical, mental and spiritual health. E-mail: Lyndamiddleton9@gmail.com.

Edward E. Moody, Jr., Ph.D. I am chair of the Department of Allied Health at North Carolina Central University. In addition, I have served as a minister at Tippetts Chapel since 2000. I would like to develop a program to teach counselor education students at North Carolina Central University how to conduct a spiritual history. If properly designed, this could be developed into an online training that could have a more long-range impact. Also, no studies have examined impact of religion on health from Cuba. I have a relationship with the leadership of the Free Will Baptist denomination in Cuba as well as the leadership of the School of Psychology at the University of Havana. I have discussed with both groups the possibility of conducting research. Both have agreed to engage in and support this research. This workshop would help me learn how to get proper funding for such an endeavor as well as how to design the most effective research proposal. E-mail: emoody@ncu.edu.

Tiina Nummela, Th.M. Employed by Robert Wood Johnson University Hospital I work as the primary CPE supervisor of a 10 month residency program and the coordinator of a summer intense program. I hold a Th.M degree from the University of Helsinki, a teaching certificate from the University of Joensuu and am certified supervisor by the ACPE, Inc. I am currently in the writing phase of my D.Min thesis on pastoral care and counseling at the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Philadelphia. I am initiating a research component in our CPE residency curriculum and looking into research project options. E-mail: Tiina.Nummela@rwjuh.edu.

Godfrey Onime, M.D. I am a physician practicing internal medicine in various settings, including inpatient and outpatient work, as well as involved with hospice and palliative care, both as an attending physician in the inpatient unit and as the medical director for Southeastern Hospice in Lumberton, NC. One commonality I have found with patients in the various settings I practice is a strong reliance and belief in the power of spirituality and prayer in their health, wellbeing and even (no, especially) their dying. I have also been reading up on the field of Spirituality and Health and I'm interested in learning more about what studies are currently being conducted and hope to myself be involved in such research in the near future. Furthermore, I am very interested in writing (my works have appeared in various publications, including the New York Times) and this is a field I would very much like to write about. E-mail: godfrey3366@yahoo.com.

Christopher Oranyeli, OP. Originally I am from Nigeria in the West Coast of Africa. I am a Roman Catholic Priest (Dominican Order). I graduated from a school of pharmacy and was a board-certified, licensed and practicing hospital pharmacist in my country Nigeria. I was ordained a Catholic Priest in the year 2000. I served as a parochial vicar in a parish in my country for three years (2000-2003), after which I was sent to the United States by my religious superiors in 2003 as a Missionary. I spent three years (2003-2006) in Hershey, PA, under the Catholic Diocese of Harrisburg, PA, working as a parochial vicar at St. Joan of Arc Catholic Church, 359 West Areba Avenue, Hershey, PA, and also as the Catholic Chaplain at Penn State Milton S. Hershey Medical Center and College of Medicine, after which I spent another year (Aug. 2006- Aug. 2007) at the same hospital doing my Clinical Pastoral Education (C.P.E.) Program. I was hired by the Medical University of South Carolina (MUSC) as a professional interfaith clinical staff chaplain in December, 2007. This is where I am presently. I became board-certified by The National Association of Catholic Chaplain (NACC) in 2008. E-mail: oranyeliop@yahoo.com.

Camille Z. Roddy, MA. Camille is a seasoned fundraiser/event planner with over 15 years experience in working with non-profits, colleges and universities as an independent consultant. She has a bachelor's degree in Public Policy from UNC Chapel Hill and enjoys art, music, travel and serving others. She has served in the Junior League and on the boards of Reynolda House Museum of American Art, Diggs Gallery of African and African American Art and the North Carolina Association of Festivals and Events developing certification criteria through NC State and Applachian State Universities. After losing a fiance to complications of chronic kidney disease stemming from diabetes, she has enrolled in the MAPT program at Pfeiffer University. She is a deacon candidate tapping her spiritual gifts of teaching and leadership to pursue a career in academia. E-mail: czroddy@hotmail.com.

Bennett Sandford. Chaplain resident. E-mail: Bennett.Sandford@va.gov. Without mentorship. 8/2/12 payment coming from Naval Medical Center, Portsmouth

Linda Skalski, MA. I am a clinical psychology doctoral student (May 2015) at Duke University with an MA in religion from Duke (May 2010). I did my undergraduate work at the University of Notre Dame, and graduate work in psychology at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. My research primarily focuses on drug use and neurocognitive functioning among HIV-infected individuals, and I have strong interests in the role of religious coping. I recently submitted an application for an NRSA training grant for a study exploring how marijuana affects brain functioning in HIV-infected patients. E-mail: Lms38@duke.edu

Amy Rex Smith, DNSc, RN, ACNS, BC. Background: Nursing clinical practice: 36 years; current position as staff RN on a Medical Intermediate Care Unit at the Brigham and Womens' Hospital here in Boston. Ten years experience as a clinical nurse specialist (CNS). Current position: Associate professor in the College of Nursing and Health Sciences at the University of Massachusetts Boston (UMB), since completing doctorate at UCLA in 1994. Coordinate the Adult Health CNS program, also teach undergraduates. Research area: Spirituality and Health. Use the AACN Synergy Model, focus is on hospital nursing. Current study was funded by the U-56 Dana Farber Harvard Cancer Institute/UMB collaborative grant and examines prayer, coping, and well-being in cancer patients. E-mail: Amyrex.Smith@umb.edu.

Sandra Sulzer, Ph.D. Sandy is a recent Ph.D. graduate of the University of Wisconsin, Madison department of Sociology. She is currently a post-doctoral fellow at the UNC-Chapel Hill, Cecil G. Sheps Center for Health Services Research. Her past research has included ethnographically examining the diagnostic process of Borderline Personality Disorder, exploring mechanisms of physician empathy in medical training programs, and validating self-reports of health behaviors using text-messaging. She is currently developing a project to challenge biomedical conceptualizations of health outcomes used in CAM effectiveness research, through ethnographic research on CAM practitioner conceptualizations of "health" and "healing" in non-clinical settings. E-mail: shsulzer@wisc.edu.

Donald Verner. Chaplain resident. E-mail: Donald.Verner@va.gov. Naval Medical Center, Portsmouth.

Carol Weingarten M.D., Ph.D. Dr. Weingarten was trained in biochemistry and psychiatry. She is currently an Adjunct Assistant Professor in Psychiatry at Duke University. Her research background began in magnetic resonance and later included functional magnetic resonance imaging. Work in psychotherapy research and interpersonal relationships expanded to relationships portrayed in scriptures and attachment theory in religion. Current research interests include MRI of Parkinson's disease and depression and psychology of religion. E-mail: cw175@duke.edu.

Grace W. Yan, Ph.D. Dr. Yan graduated from Rutgers University with MS (2008) and PhD (2011) degrees in Psychology with a specialty in Clinical Psychology. She was a mental health clinician at VA Connecticut Healthcare System prior to joining the New Jersey War Related Illness and Injury Study Center (NJ VA Health Care System) in September 2011 as a Postdoctoral Psychology Fellow. Dr. Yan's current research focuses on models of patient-centered care. Her primary interests are the impact of spirituality and religiosity on health, and the use of family interventions in military populations. Her past research evaluated the use of community-based psycho-education on help seeking attitudes in minority populations. E-mail: Weiyin.Yan@va.gov.
