

F Susan Cowchock, M.D., M.B.A., M.H.L.

Senior Research Associate

Center for Spirituality, Theology and Health

Duke University Medical Center

B. Sc. The Penna. State University

M.A. Biochemistry, Temple University

M.D. Jefferson Medical College

M.B.A. Health Care Administration, Temple University

M.H.L. The Reconstructionist Rabbinical College

Dr. Cowchock completed a residency in Internal Medicine at Jefferson Medical College and a post-doctoral fellowship in Reproductive Endocrinology at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center. She was co-Director of the Pregnancy Loss Center at Jefferson Medical Center, and Joint Professor of both Medicine and Obstetrics and Gynecology. She came to Duke as a post-doctoral fellow in Religion/Health Research and is involved in clinical research through the Center for Spirituality, Theology and Health. She is an ordained rabbi and board-certified chaplain through the Association of Professional Chaplains and serves as a volunteer chaplain for the Pastoral Care Service at Duke. Her major research interest is the role of religion in ethical decision-making and coping with loss in pregnancy.